Our partners.

At The R&A Foundation, we use our unrivalled relationships to create meaningful impact for and through golf through the power of partnership.

Working with the Singapore Golf Association (SGA), the national custodian of the sport and affiliate of The R&A, we are creating pathways for Singaporeans to join the golf profession, expanding diversity and local talent across the industry.

With The R&A regional office in Singapore as our hub for golf in Asia, we are proud to closely collaborate with the SGA and the golf clubs of Singapore to deliver the Careers in Golf Bursary programme.

About the bursary.

The R&A Foundation Careers in Golf Bursary initiative offers a comprehensive learning and development opportunity. Its aim is to nurture local talent within the golf industry in Singapore and provide work experience placements at golf clubs, including designated mentorship and further education opportunities.

This award provides three elements of support:

1 An education bursary, directly funding the cost of industry recognised foundational courses and certifications.

Greenkeeping applicants will undertake the Certificate in Greenkeeping, a 12 month, modular based programme which will develop skills to maintain world class golf courses whilst promoting sustainable practices. From protecting turf to enhancing productivity, the programme will produce skilled greenkeepers based on recognised standards across Asia.

Club Management applicants will undertake the Apprenticeship in Club Management, a 12 month modular based programme to build their knowledge base across administrative, marketing and facility operations skill sets, forming the foundation needed to excel in the management of facilities, people and events.

2 A year-long paid training placement at a Singapore golf club.

Successful applicants will be placed at selected golf clubs, with roles in Greenkeeping and Club Management respectively for over a year.

The placement comes with a minimum of SGD$2,500 salary per month before CPF.

The bursars will be able to put their education and training into practice in a supported working environment further developing skills on ground.

This programme is designed to strengthen and expand the local golf industry infrastructure, creating a more skilled, diverse and inclusive workforce and expand the talent pipeline in Singapore.

3 Mentorship and peer support facilitated through The R&A's local and global networks.

Throughout the bursary programme, bursars will be supported and guided by industry experts and professionals.

The support network will ensure we provide the bursars the best possible experience in their placement and direction in their future career development within or outside the industry.

Certificate in Greenkeeping.

The R&A partners with New Zealand Sports Turf Institute to deliver entry level education for those working in turf management in the golf industry.

The Certificate in Greenkeeping (CIG) is a key component of The R&A's in developing and nurturing greenkeeping talent and raising the profile and appeal of this profession.

The R&A CIG is a five module programme consisting of:

- 1 Golf course ecology
- 2 Managing greenkeeping staff
- 3 Surface management on a golf course
- 4 Rootzone and soil water management on a golf course
- 5 Identifying and controlling common golf course pests, weeds, diseases and disorders

The CIG is a 12 month learning programme and a key feature is the blended workplace learning, where learners apply the technical skills and processes learnt to a variety of golf course turf management situations under the supervision of a qualified workplace mentor.

The programme commences with a five day residential titled the 'Introduction' course, a further five day residential 'Progression' course is scheduled generally three to four months later, and culminates with a three day 'Confirmation' course approximately six to eight months after the Progression course.

Apprenticeship in club management.

The R&A partners with the Club Managers Association of America (CMAA) to deliver entry level education for those embarking on a career in club management. The Apprenticeship in Club Management (AICM) is a key component of The R&A's support in developing and nurturing club managers of the future within the golf industry.

The AICM is an 11 module programme, mapped to the core competency framework of the renowned and industry recognised CMAA education pathway for Club Management. This Apprenticeship will provide scholars with the foundation knowledge to progress to the next level and work towards their Diploma in Club Management.
